Organisation of English EAL/D 11–12

The organisation of focus areas, outcomes and content for English EAL/D 11–12 highlights the interdependence of knowledge, understanding and skills in the course and the recursive ways in which these skills are developed.

Students develop knowledge, understanding and skills through the focus areas.

Year 11

- Reading to write: Transition to English EAL/D
- Texts and society
- Close study of text

Year 12

- Texts and human experiences
- Language, identity and culture
- Close study of text
- Writing

Image long description: The Year 11 focus areas appear in boxes in a row at the top of the diagram, surrounded by a line labelled 'Year 11'. The focus areas are: Reading to write: Transition to English EAL/D; Texts and society; and Close study of text. The Year 12 focus areas appear at the bottom of the diagram in boxes in a row, surrounded by a line labelled 'Year 12'. The focus areas are: Texts and human experiences; Language, identity and culture; Close study of text; and Writing. The lines surrounding the Year 11 and 12 focus areas cross through a box in the centre of the diagram, which is titled 'Understanding and responding to texts'.

Protocols for collaborating with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Communities

NESA is committed to working in partnership with Aboriginal Communities and supporting teachers, schools and schooling sectors to improve educational outcomes for young people.

It is important to respect appropriate ways of interacting with Aboriginal Communities and Cultural material when teachers plan, program and implement learning experiences that focus on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Priorities.

Indigenous Cultural and Intellectual Property (ICIP) protocols need to be followed. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples' ICIP protocols include Cultural Knowledges, Cultural Expression and Cultural Property and documentation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples' Identities and lived experiences. It is important to recognise the diversity and complexity of different Cultural groups in NSW, as protocols may differ between local Aboriginal Communities.

Teachers should work in partnership with Elders, parents, Community members, Cultural Knowledge Holders, or a local, regional or state Aboriginal Education Consultative Group. It is important to respect Elders and the roles of men and women. Local Aboriginal Peoples should be invited to share their Cultural Knowledges with students and staff when engaging with Aboriginal histories and Cultural Practices.

Course description

English EAL/D 11–12 provides students the opportunity to develop and consolidate their use, understanding and appreciation of Standard Australian English. Students engage in rich language experiences that are reflected through the integrated modes of reading, writing, speaking, listening, viewing and representing.

What students learn

Through the study of English EAL/D 11–12, students:

- develop clear communication skills for a range of purposes and audiences
- understand and evaluate information and arguments to inform their understanding of ideas
- make informed assumptions about the purpose and meaning of language based on context and culture
- express personal experiences and opinions and develop knowledge and skills as independent learners.

Course structure and requirements

Eligibility

The English EAL/D course may be studied by:

- any student who has been educated overseas or in an Australian educational institution with English as the language of instruction for 5 years or less prior to commencing the Year 11 course
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students from remote Indigenous communities where Standard Australian English is not the language of instruction.

Requirements for entry into English EAL/D 11–12, including instructions for students and principals, are outlined in ACE.

Year 11 course structure and requirements

English EAL/D Year 11 course (120 hours)	Indicative hours
Reading to write: Transition to English EAL/D	40
Texts and society	40
Close study of text	40

For the English EAL/D Year 11 course, students are required to:

- complete 120 indicative hours
- complete Reading to write: Transition to English EAL/D as the first unit of work
- complete Texts and society; and Close study of text
- engage in speaking and listening components in each focus area.

The modes of speaking and listening are integral to the development of language skills for students in their acquisition of the English language. For some students with disability, teachers will need to consider relevant and appropriate adjustments to speaking, listening and communication experiences in the context of the English EAL/D 11–12 Syllabus.

Text requirements

There are no prescribed texts for Year 11.

Students are required to study ONE quality literary text; for example a film, prose fiction, a drama or a poetry study which may constitute a selection of poems from the work of one poet.

Across Stage 6 the selection of texts must give students experience of:

- texts that are widely regarded as quality literature
- a range of Australian texts
- a range of texts authored by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Peoples
- a range of types of texts, inclusive of prose fiction, drama, poetry, nonfiction, film, media and digital texts
- texts with a range of social, cultural and gender perspectives
- integrated modes of reading, writing, listening, speaking, viewing and representing, where appropriate.

Year 12 course structure and requirements

English EAL/D Year 12 course (120 hours)	Indicative hours
Texts and human experiences	30
Language, identity and culture	30
Close study of text	30
Writing	30

For the English EAL/D Year 12 course, students are required to:

- complete the Year 11 course as a prerequisite
- complete 120 indicative hours
- complete Texts and human experiences as the first unit of work
- complete Language, identity and culture; Close study of text; and Writing
- engage in speaking and listening components in each focus area.

The modes of speaking and listening are integral to the development of language skills for students in their acquisition of the English language. For some students with disability, teachers will need to consider relevant and appropriate adjustments to speaking, listening and communication experiences in the context of the English EAL/D 11–12 Syllabus.

Text requirements

Students are required to closely study 3 types of prescribed texts, with ONE drawn from each of the following categories:

- prose fiction
- poetry
- drama OR film OR media OR nonfiction.

The selections of texts for the focus area of Writing do not contribute to the required pattern of prescribed texts for the course.

Across Stage 6 the selection of texts must give students experience of:

- texts that are widely regarded as quality literature

- a range of Australian texts
- a range of texts authored by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Peoples
- a range of types of texts inclusive of prose fiction, drama, poetry, nonfiction, film, media and digital texts
- texts with a range of social, cultural and gender perspectives
- integrated modes of reading, writing, listening, speaking, viewing and representing, where appropriate.

The HSC English prescriptions 2027–2030 provides essential information for HSC study for all English 11–12 courses.

Safety and risk management

Schools are required to ensure they follow safety and risk management in delivering the English EAL/D 11–12 Syllabus.

Texts authored by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Peoples

Across Stage 6, the study of a range of texts authored by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Peoples should consider:

- the artistic and Cultural value of these texts, including ideas, arguments and representations of identity, histories and Cultures
- how Country/Place, Community and lived experiences shape the perspectives of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Storytellers and audiences
- ethical responsibilities surrounding Indigenous Cultural and Intellectual Property (ICIP) in the production of texts
- how Storytelling, Aboriginal Languages and Aboriginal English are expressions of Culture, identity and Customary practices
- how the modes of these texts may recognise and contribute to Cultural conventions or practices of oral Storytelling
- how Cultural symbolism, imagery, allusion and irony are used to shape meaning
- how personal values and perspectives are broadened and reconsidered through engagement with these texts
- texts that originate from a range of diverse Communities.

Rationale

Rationale for English in Stage 6 Curriculum

In acknowledgement of its role as the national language, English is a mandatory subject from Kindergarten to Year 12 in the NSW Curriculum. Knowledge, understanding and skills acquired in English are central to students' learning and development.

Language and text shape an understanding of individuals and the world. Language allows students to relate to others, and contributes to their intellectual, social and emotional development. In English K–12, students study language in its various textual forms, with increasing complexity, to understand how meaning is shaped, conveyed, interpreted and reflected.

Students engage with literature from Australia and across the world. They develop an understanding of the diversity of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples and the interconnections of Country/Place, Culture and Community. Texts communicate in distinctive ways and are shaped by experiences, knowledge and cultures. By exploring past and contemporary texts, with a range of cultural and social perspectives, students broaden their experiences and become empowered in their identities, values and ethics.

Through interrelated practices and experiences in understanding and creating texts, students explore the power, purpose, value and art of English. These support students to become literate and confident communicators, critical and imaginative thinkers, and informed and active participants in society.

The study of English in this syllabus is founded on the belief that language learning is recursive and develops through ever-widening contexts. Students learn English through explicit teaching of language and literacy, and through their engagement with a range of purposeful and increasingly demanding textual experiences.

Rationale for English EAL/D

The English EAL/D 11–12 Syllabus is designed to support students learning English as an additional language or dialect whose first language is a language or dialect other than Standard Australian English and students whose first language is an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander Language, and Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander students whose first language is Aboriginal English. Aboriginal Languages are unique to each Aboriginal Language Group and are in various stages of revival, revitalisation and maintenance. The course is designed to strengthen language knowledge and skills, provide an opportunity to develop students' intellectual, social and emotional development, and understand how meaning is shaped, conveyed, interpreted and reflected.

In English EAL/D 11–12, students have the opportunity to enjoy, analyse and respond to a range of English texts so they can become confident communicators in the integrated modes of reading, writing, speaking, listening, viewing and representing and to allow them to improve their English language skills. Students engage critically with a wide range of texts from diverse cultures, including multimodal and interactive texts. They engage critically with a range of texts from academic, personal, social, cultural, historical and workplace contexts.

The Stage 6 English EAL/D course provides students with the opportunity to develop and refine speaking and listening English skills, collaborative and critical thinking skills as well as intercultural understandings. Explicit and targeted English language instruction supports students' learning about literature. The syllabus supports a range of approaches to developing skills to interact with texts so that students develop confidence in critical thinking, capable of understanding the diversity and variety of cultural heritages that make up Australian society.

EAL/D learners come from diverse backgrounds and bring a variety of linguistic and cultural experiences to the classroom. The EAL/D course reflects and extends students' lived experiences and provides them with the opportunity to improve their knowledge, understanding and appreciation of the diversity of Australian society and the rich Histories and Cultures of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples.

Aim

The aim of English in Years 11–12 is to enable students to understand and use language effectively. Students have the opportunity to appreciate, reflect on and enjoy literature, and make meaning in ways that are imaginative, creative, interpretive, critical and powerful. Students value the English language in its various textual forms to become thoughtful and effective communicators in a diverse world.

Outcomes and content for Year 11

Reading to write: Transition to English EAL/D

Outcomes

A student:

- analyses the ways an author's choice of textual forms and features shapes meaning in texts from different modes and mediums EEA-11-01
- explains the ways context, cultural references and perspectives influence composition and audience response EEA-11-02
- explains the connections between texts EEA-11-03
- communicates information, ideas and opinions in a range of modes for a variety of purposes, audiences and contexts EEA-11-04
- composes critical and creative texts that use textual form and language features to shape meaning for a range of purposes and audiences EEA-11-05
- identifies how choices of language, form and structure can shape meaning in own compositions EEA-11-06

Content

Students read, view and listen to quality short texts from a variety of modes and mediums. In doing so, they experiment with reading strategies to examine language and gradually increase their vocabulary in English through their engagement with imaginative, discursive and persuasive texts. They read texts that are engaging aesthetically, stylistically and conceptually to inspire them to respond critically and creatively. Students develop their understanding and use of form and structure when composing and responding to texts. To build their language proficiency and fluency students develop their understanding of metalanguage to use in their own compositions. Explicit, targeted English language study centres on using descriptive, rhetorical and persuasive language appropriate for purpose and audience. Students also develop their understanding and use of correct syntax, the effect of phrasal verbs and collocations, and clause and sentence structure in their own spoken and written texts across a range of modes and mediums.

Students compare and contrast texts to develop their own written expression and offer inspiration for their own writing. They also develop the vocabulary to appreciate, understand and analyse texts, and plan, draft and refine their own written and spoken texts. Through wide reading of texts, students develop insights into the world around them, deepen their understanding of themselves and others, and enhance their enjoyment of reading to strengthen their personal voice as writers.

Understanding

- The language forms, text structures and stylistic features in spoken and written texts to shape ideas and perspectives, including parts of speech and verb forms and tenses
- Synonyms and antonyms
- The use of discourse markers to show cause and effect
- The ways ideas, attitudes and perspectives are represented in spoken and written texts and how these shape meaning
- The conventions of genre and the ways texts may conform or subvert these conventions
- The impact of language forms, conventions and literary devices in familiar and unfamiliar texts

Responding

- Compose texts that experiment with tone, modality and register for different purposes and audiences
- Compose imaginative texts that experiment with point of view, form and setting to represent a range of personal, social, historical or cultural contexts and perspectives
- Select and use appropriate structure to communicate ideas and opinions for different purposes, audiences and contexts
- Compose critical and creative texts that use accurate spelling, punctuation and syntax in a range of modes and mediums
- Plan, draft and refine ideas and language in own texts for a range of purposes and audiences
- Assess their choices of language and textual form in their own critical and creative compositions

Texts and society

Outcomes

A student:

- analyses the ways an author's choice of textual forms and features shapes meaning in texts from different modes and mediums EEA-11-01
- explains the ways context, cultural references and perspectives influence composition and audience response EEA-11-02
- explains the connections between texts EEA-11-03
- communicates information, ideas and opinions in a range of modes for a variety of purposes, audiences and contexts EEA-11-04
- composes critical and creative texts that use textual form and language features to shape meaning for a range of purposes and audiences EEA-11-05
- identifies how choices of language, form and structure can shape meaning in own compositions EEA-11-06

Content

Students explore, analyse, respond to and compose a selection of texts that are commonly encountered in community, vocational and academic settings. They investigate how these texts communicate information, ideas, attitudes and belief systems.

Students compare and contrast the types of texts that are used in community interactions, workplace communication and formal learning situations across different disciplines. They read and listen for specific content in texts to identify and explain the purposes, to distinguish between facts and opinions and to examine the similarities and differences in textual forms and language features. They consider what the texts indicate and imply about prevailing customs, norms, behaviours and organisational cultures in the social and vocational contexts in which they are used, and the construction of knowledge in particular fields of study and academic disciplines.

Explicit, targeted English language study centres on aspects of language usage, including recognising irony and humour, technical terminology, appropriacy and jargon, and understanding and using conventions of textual forms and language to shape meaning and influence responders (the reader, listener, viewer, an audience) in specific contexts.

Understanding

- The impact of variations in style and register in spoken and written texts in semi-formal and formal texts and contexts
- The use of active and passive voice
- Clause types, including declarative, interrogative, imperative and exclamative
- The ways in which verbal and nonverbal elements interact to shape meaning

Responding

- Compose texts in a range of modes and mediums with appropriate application of language conventions including syntax, spelling and grammar
- Compose a variety of texts in different modes and mediums to present ideas and opinions for different purposes and audiences
- Use technical terminology, semantic fields, appropriacy and jargon in spoken and written texts particular to specific areas of society
- Use the information and ideas gathered from a range of texts to present and support ideas in analytical, expressive and imaginative ways

- Plan, draft and refine ideas and language in own texts for a range of purposes and audiences

Close study of text

Outcomes

A student:

- analyses the ways an author's choice of textual forms and features shapes meaning in texts from different modes and mediums EEA-11-01
- explains the ways context, cultural references and perspectives influence composition and audience response EEA-11-02
- explains the connections between texts EEA-11-03
- communicates information, ideas and opinions in a range of modes for a variety of purposes, audiences and contexts EEA-11-04
- composes critical and creative texts that use textual form and language features to shape meaning for a range of purposes and audiences EEA-11-05
- identifies how choices of language, form and structure can shape meaning in own compositions EEA-11-06

Content

Students develop understanding, knowledge and appreciation of a substantial literary text, its information and ideas, and consider the ways in which the content, form and language of the text shape meaning.

In their study of one substantial literary text students experiment with interpretive approaches to examine the text's meaning and significance and develop and expand their vocabulary of interpretation and response. Explicit, targeted English language study centres on identifying, analysing and responding to the ways in which language shapes meaning, including implied meaning, in their text. Students also examine the language and conventions that are particular to their literary form, and the ways that authors make inferences, and use, manipulate and challenge those conventions.

Understanding

- The aesthetic qualities, themes and representation of ideas, values and attitudes in a text
- The ways the context of the author and the audience shape meaning
- Language for making connections, posing questions, affirming, challenging, speculating and generalising

Responding

- Compose sustained texts that experiment with appropriate metalanguage and structural choices to shape perspectives and opinions in a range of modes and mediums
- Use descriptive, rhetorical and persuasive language to express ideas, attitudes and evaluations of texts
- Apply the conventions of syntax, spelling and grammar accurately in own compositions for specific purposes, audiences and contexts
- Plan, draft, reflect, edit and refine texts using accurate syntax in clauses and sentences for a range of purposes and audiences

Outcomes and content for Year 12

Texts and human experiences

Outcomes

A student:

- evaluates the ways an author's choice of textual forms and features shapes meaning in texts from different modes and mediums EEA-12-01
- analyses the ways context, cultural references and perspectives influence composition and audience response EEA-12-02
- analyses the connections between texts EEA-12-03
- communicates ideas, perspectives and arguments in a range of modes for a variety of purposes, audiences and contexts EEA-12-04
- composes critical and creative texts that use textual form and language features to shape meaning for a range of purposes and audiences EEA-12-05
- explains how choices of language, form and structure can shape meaning in own compositions EEA-12-06

Content

Students interpret and respond to texts that examine what it means to be human. They experiment with different approaches to textual appreciation and analysis, consolidating and building on skills in reading, speaking, listening, viewing, responding and composing. They undertake the study of ONE prescribed text and explore a range of short texts in a variety of forms and media. Students examine how texts provide insight into emotional, intellectual, physical, cultural and lived experiences and draw from personal experience to make connections between themselves, the world of the text and their wider world.

They consider the role of storytelling throughout time in communicating and reflecting the human experience. They explore how texts represent the tension between agency and conformity in our human experience, while examining the paradoxes of motivation and behaviour. Explicit, targeted English language study centres on structural, stylistic and linguistic elements, including the use of descriptive and expressive language in spoken and written texts. Students analyse texts, comparing and contrasting the ways composers, narrators and personas represent insights into the human experience and explore their own assumptions about the possibilities of human experience.

Understanding

- Comparative, temporal and consequential conjunctions
- The impact of direct and indirect speech
- The use of literary and persuasive features, including rhetorical devices, figurative language and dramatic irony, in familiar and unfamiliar texts
- The ways arguments are presented in nonfiction texts

Responding

- Compose creative, informed and sustained interpretations of texts supported by integrated textual evidence
- Apply a range of language features in own compositions
- Make connections with other texts through language, form and structure
- Use cohesive links and discourse markers to show cause and effect in spoken and written texts

- Use metalanguage to interpret texts and evaluate their own learning

Language, identity and culture

Outcomes

A student:

- evaluates the ways an author's choice of textual forms and features shapes meaning in texts from different modes and mediums EEA-12-01
- analyses the ways context, cultural references and perspectives influence composition and audience response EEA-12-02
- analyses the connections between texts EEA-12-03
- communicates ideas, perspectives and arguments in a range of modes for a variety of purposes, audiences and contexts EEA-12-04
- composes critical and creative texts that use textual form and language features to shape meaning for a range of purposes and audiences EEA-12-05
- explains how choices of language, form and structure can shape meaning in own compositions EEA-12-06

Content

Language has the power to reflect and shape individual and collective identity. Students explore and analyse the ways that language is used to express the complexities and subtleties of personal, social and cultural identity. They investigate how textual forms and conventions, and language structures and features are used to communicate information, ideas, values and attitudes. Students also consider the impact texts have on shaping individuals' or communities' sense of identity in both personal and public worlds that inform and influence perceptions of ourselves and other people. Through the study of ONE prescribed text and a range of short texts, students develop an understanding of how individual perceptions of and relationships with others and the world are shaped by spoken, written and visual language.

Through close language study, and by experimenting with different language choices, students consider and reflect on ways in which texts affirm and challenge prevailing assumptions and beliefs about individuals, and social and cultural groupings. Explicit, targeted English language study centres on vernaculars, idioms, colloquialisms and other forms of expression representing aspects of individual and collective identity. Students consider representations of and perspectives on culture and identity and they reflect on their own and others' experiences of adapting to changed circumstances.

Understanding

- The ways cultural perspectives and identities are represented in texts
- The ways in which texts created by authors from diverse backgrounds represent people, places, histories and experiences
- Culturally specific phrases, idioms, colloquialisms, collocations and references in a range of texts
- The different perspectives on personal, social and historical issues represented in texts

Responding

- Compose texts that use forms and features to represent a range of perspectives on culture and identity
- Compose critical texts that affirm and challenge ideas, values and perspectives that are represented in text
- Use accurate syntax in clauses and sentences in own spoken and written texts

- Make connections with other texts through language, form and structure

Content

Students develop and refine their knowledge and skills in writing, speaking and representing. They create and present a range of texts to communicate information, ideas, values and attitudes for different purposes, audiences and contexts.

Students analyse, evaluate and reflect on the expressive, aesthetic and imaginative qualities of a wide range of written, spoken and multimodal texts, including texts studied in other focus areas. Using these texts as models, they experiment with techniques, styles and forms in a range of modes and mediums to produce their own works, including imaginative, discursive and persuasive texts. Explicit, targeted English language study includes research and referencing, and implementing and maintaining ethical practices and standards when composing texts. As part of the writing process, students generate ideas, experiment with techniques, styles and forms, and reflect on the language choices in their own compositions.

Understanding

- The ways language forms, features and structures are adapted for different purposes, audiences and contexts in a range of forms, modes and mediums
- The impact of descriptive, rhetorical and persuasive language
- Synonyms and antonyms
- The impact of conventions of form and structure in their own spoken and written compositions

Responding

- Compose sustained imaginative, persuasive, discursive texts that affirm and challenge the ideas, perspectives and values represented in other texts
- Recreate existing texts as new texts by changing context and perspective
- Select and apply a range of language, structural and stylistic features to shape meaning and influence readers
- Use referencing skills to support ideas, arguments and perspectives in own compositions
- Plan, draft and refine spoken and written texts applying accurate conventions of syntax, spelling and grammar for their purpose, audience and context
